Preface

This document, Standards for Accreditation of Seventh-day Adventist Early Childhood Education Programs, is the basis for the evaluation and accreditation of all early childhood programs (ECPs) in the North American Division.

The Seventh-day Adventist early childhood programs offer opportunities for children birth to five years of age to extend their learning experience, before formal schooling, in a developmentally appropriate environment. Based on age, levels of development, and learning styles, such an environment fosters natural curiosity and stimulates cognitive, physical, social, emotional and spiritual growth. Standards which serve as the foundation of best practices of caring for and educating young children serve as the standards of the evaluation and accreditation process.

This instrument is the basis for the self-study. The instrument contains instructions and details the responsibilities for those persons and teams involved in the evaluation process and for completing the self-study. The completed self-study instrument becomes the Self-study Report.

Philosophical Foundation of Adventist Education

PHILOSOPHY

The Seventh-day Adventist Church recognizes God as the ultimate source of existence, truth, and power. In the beginning God created in His image a perfect humanity, a perfection later marred by sin. Education in its broadest sense is a means of returning human beings to their original relationship with God. The distinctive characteristics of this Adventist worldview, built around creation, the fall, redemption, and re-creation, are derived from the Bible and the inspired writings of Ellen G. White.

The aim of true education is to restore human beings into the image of God as revealed by the life of Jesus Christ. Only through the guidance of the Holy Spirit can this be accomplished. An education of this kind imparts far more than academic knowledge. It fosters a balanced development of the whole person—spiritual, physical, intellectual, and social-emotional—a process that spans a lifetime. Working together, homes, programs, and churches cooperate with divine agencies to prepare learners to be good citizens in this world and for eternity.

MISSION

To enable learners to develop a life of faith in God, and to use their knowledge, skills, and understandings to serve God and humanity.

VISION

For every learner to excel in faith, learning, and service, blending biblical truth and academic achievement to honor God and bless others.

ECE Philosophy

The Core of Adventist Education Curriculum, aligned with the Journey to Excellence document, provides the basis for the ECE Philosophy and Goals of the ECE programs.

The ECE Philosophy serves as the foundational framework and is reflective of the values, beliefs, and practices inherent in all Seventh-day Adventist early childhood programs. The Philosophy is based on current research and best practices in the field of ECE as well as the expertise and experiences of those in the field. The current ECE philosophy was adopted by the North American Division of the Seventh-day Adventist Church and the philosophy that follows can also be found in the Working Policies of the North American Division.

It is only through daily interaction with Christ-centered, caring adults that young children will learn the importance and develop the habit of beholding Christ's loveliness (White, 1995). Learning to behold Christ means that children are given daily opportunities to talk about Him, search for truth, understanding, and practicality, and learn to see and desire all that is lovely, holy, uplifting and pure (Nichol, 1957; White, 1961). In so doing, young children will "become changed, morally assimilated to the One who is perfect in character" (Nichol, 1957).

North American Division Early Childhood Education (ECE) has its foundation in the Biblical imperative for purposeful training of the young child. We are instructed to teach the words of Scripture "diligently unto thy children," and to "train up a child in the way he should go" (Deuteronomy 6:7, and Proverbs 22:6, KJV). The North American Division recognizes that the early education of young children is the beginning of a continual growth process. "Too much importance cannot be placed upon the early training of children. The lessons learned, the habits formed, during the years of infancy and childhood, have more to do with the formation of the character and the direction of the life than have all the instruction and training of after years" (Ministry of Healing, p. 380).

In writing to parents and teachers, Ellen G. White said, "No work ever undertaken by man requires greater care and skill than the proper training and education of youth and children" (White, 1954/2002, CG, p. 39, para. 1). "True education is not the forcing of instruction on an unready and unreceptive mind" (White, 1903/2002, Ed., p. 41, para. 2). "True education... has to do with the whole being, and with the whole period of existence possible to man. It is the harmonious development of the physical, the mental, and the spiritual powers" (White, 1903/2002, Ed., p. 13, para. 1). Such harmonious development is found in the study of God's law, the Bible, nature, service to others and "useful occupation" (White, 1903/2002, Ed., p. 21, para. 3). Hence, the "first object of education is to direct our minds" and those of our children to God's revelation of Himself (Matthew 6:22; Psalms 111:10; Proverbs 9:10; White, 1903/2002, Ed., p. 16, para. 4). An education of this kind imparts far more than academic knowledge. It is a balanced development of the whole child with time dimensions that spans throughout eternity. Therefore, the early childhood program, the home, and the church cooperate together with Divine agencies in preparing young learners for citizenship here on this earth and in the New Earth to come.*

Adventist early childhood educators seek to nurture the minds of young children. Early childhood educators focus on strengthening children's ability to be thinkers rather than mere reflectors of the thoughts of others, and to maximize their potential (Ed., p. 11, 17). In partnership with the home and church, it is essential that a balanced early childhood program meet the needs of a child's spiritual, physical, intellectual, social, and emotional development from birth to entrance into formal schooling. This focus has the full intention of affirming the value of each child and family, bringing them closer to Christ.

WHAT IS ACCREDITATION?

NAD Accreditation of Early Childhood Education Programs

The Adventist Accrediting Association (AAA) is the denominational accrediting authority for all educational institutions operated in the name of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. It fosters close cooperation among the educational institutions of the Adventist system and effective working relationships with other educational organizations or institutions, accrediting agencies, and government departments of education.

The AAA provides a process by which the educational community holds an institution accountable for its own objectives. It assures the church and constituency that an accredited Adventist educational institution offers programs of quality to the youth of the church and provides professional personnel who meet both church and national/provincial standards. This process ensures a basis for reciprocity among Adventist schools.

The standards for accreditation of Seventh-day Adventist schools and early childhood programs are the basis for the evaluation and accreditation of all educational institutions in the North American Division.

The accreditation process:

- Assists each Early Childhood Program in appraising the total program to determine the level to which the purposes and functions outlined in its statement of philosophy and goals for child learning are accomplished, and the extent to which these purposes and functions address the standards for accreditation.
- Involves the administration, staff, local governing board, constituency, and parents in a meaningful evaluation of the program.
- Provides an independent review of the Self-study Report.
- Provides the basis for Continuous Improvement Plans to address areas needing improvement.
- Provides the basis for determining a status of accreditation.
- Assists in providing external validation with regional and/or national accrediting associations.

The North American Division Commission on Accreditation (NADCOA) serves as the agent of the AAA for accreditation of all schools and early childhood programs in the North American Division. The duties and functions of the NADCOA are to:

- 1. Establish standards for quality early childhood education.
- 2. Adopt criteria, guidelines, and procedures for accreditation visits.
- 3. Periodically review the accreditation status of each ECP in the North American Division.
- 4. Determine the data to be collected for the periodic evaluation of schools and ECPs.
- 5. Review the Visiting Team Report, determine the status of accreditation for each ECP, and forward recommendations to the AAA for final action.
- 6. Review appeals from schools and ECPs regarding the recommendations of the Visiting Team.
- 7. Consider all matters referred to the NADCOA by the North American Division Office of Education, General Conference Department of Education, and/or the AAA.
- 8. Initiate, process, and revise reports, recommendations, and resolutions for action by the AAA.

WHY DOES ACCREDITATION MATTER?

Rationale for Accreditation Standards

"Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord and not for man."

Colossians 3:23

According to the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), "The process [of accreditation] is designed to focus on evidence of a program's ability to meet the program standards and accreditation criteria consistently over time. Evidence includes observable evidence that can be directly seen—in classroom practices or as part of the program facility; survey evidence that reflects the opinions of key program stakeholders including families and teaching staff; and portfolio evidence that is specifically collected by program staff to document the policies, procedures, and practices for individual classrooms as well as the overall program.

Fundamental to accreditation is the quality of the educational program experienced by children.

FOUNDATIONAL BELIEFS & VALUES

The Core of Adventist Education is grounded in the worldview of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, and ECP improvement should always be viewed through the lens of our core beliefs and values.

ATTAINMENT OF EXCELLENCE

Excellent programs demonstrate a commitment to ongoing self-assessment, evidence-informed practice, and strategic planning. Reflective practices assist programs to focus on important questions, such as: How can this ECP better demonstrate and integrate its faith and philosophy? How can this ECP help children become successful learners and informed citizens? How can this ECP support quality teaching and leadership? How can this ECP develop and sustain strong partnerships? How can this ECP improve outcomes for all children?

CONTINUOUS IMPROVEMENT PLAN

Achieving excellence requires a commitment to continuous improvement and quality assurance with energies and resources directed towards the improvement of teaching and learning within a standards-based framework.

WHY DOES ACCREDITATION MATTER?

Standards for Accreditation

Standards are ideals for quality educational programs that are specific, attainable, and measurable. They describe an effective program that leads to continuous ECP improvement and results in improved child learning.

Standards for accreditation of Seventh-day Adventist early childhood programs have been established for the four domains: Purpose, Plan, Practice, Product. These domains identify the Core of Adventist Education (see page VIII) and are in alignment with A Journey to Excellence.

The Standards offer a shared vision of Seventh-day Adventist education, but to make the vision real, the details must be constructed uniquely and personally, within particular communities of learners. Thus, quality educational programs may look very different from one another. In the same way, good educational programs should find many pathways to help our children meet high standards, so that they can effectively achieve academic success and become effective witnesses of the mission of the church.

I: PURPOSE

1. Philosophy and Mission—The philosophy and mission statement reflect the Seventh-day Adventist worldview and educational philosophy and give direction to the ECPs, and are developed and approved cooperatively by the administration, staff, and ECP board.

II: PLAN

- Curriculum—The curriculum is the core of the educational program providing for the spiritual, mental, physical, social, and emotional development of children and preparing them for this world and for eternity.
- 3. Instruction—The instructional program is aligned with curriculum design and assessment practices and provides for a variety of learning experiences, consistent with the ECP's philosophy, goals, and standards, and actively engages children in learning.
- Assessment—Assessment data informs changes in curriculum and instruction.

III: PRACTICE

- 5. Sustainable Leadership—Administration and ECP board ensure the effective and successful operation of the ECP.
- 6. ECP Environment—The ECP environment is designed and maintained to promote child learning and to support the ECP's mission and goals.
- 7. Professional Learning—Administration and staff collaborate to develop and implement professional learning opportunities to enhance the ongoing growth and development of ECP personnel.
- 8. Communication and Collaboration—Communication and collaboration among the ECP, families, constituency and community are essential to providing an effective educational program.

IV: PRODUCT

9. ECP Improvement—The accreditation process assists an ECP in appraising the total program to determine the level to which the purposes and functions outlined in its statement of philosophy and goals for child learning are accomplished as well as in providing the basis for CIPs to address areas needing improvement.

Self-Study Process

The primary purpose of the self-study report is to advance a clearer understanding of your program and to promote self-improvement. The self-study report is most useful when it is analytical and focused on the future rather than being descriptive or defensive; when it is used to identify problems and to develop solutions to them; and when it identifies opportunities for growth and development (Middle States Association on Accreditation, 2007).

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETING THE SELF-STUDY REPORT

Self-study is a procedure that should be on-going and allows you to describe, evaluate, and subsequently improve the quality of your program. Self-assessment involves the identification of your strengths and limitations and the development of an action plan that delineates the steps necessary to correct those limitations. Self-study requires a commitment to the process and to change in order to enhance your program.

Through the self-study procedure, your program will conduct a systematic, and in-depth examination of your program in light of your mission and the standards and criteria as defined in the NAD ECE Learning Standards. This type of evaluation will allow you to determine your progress to accomplishing your self-established goals and objectives through careful observation and evaluation of input obtained from key stakeholders directly and indirectly involved with the program.

HOW IS SELF-STUDY ACCOMPLISHED?

There is no single way to complete the task of selfevaluation. It may take as long as 6 to 18 months to complete the initial phase of self-assessment. At the end of that period, a working document should be developed that facilitates further program review and revision.

A well-planned and successful self-study must involve collection of data from those associated with the program directly or indirectly. Information must be obtained throughout each of the various stages of the study and should be obtained from a representative sample of the teachers, current and past families, constituents, community representatives, and the programs' governing body.

Self-study goes beyond data collection. Self-assessment will require you to assess your program's strengths and needs and to then develop a plan as to how you will alleviate limitations revealed by the data.

Once the Self-study process is completed, external peer reviewers (the Visiting Committee) will spend time reviewing your report and will then visit your program to confirm what has been reported. The visit will provide you the opportunity to showcase your program, to ascertain the feedback and suggestions from external ECE experts, and to potentially obtain accreditation for your program.

Standards for Accreditation

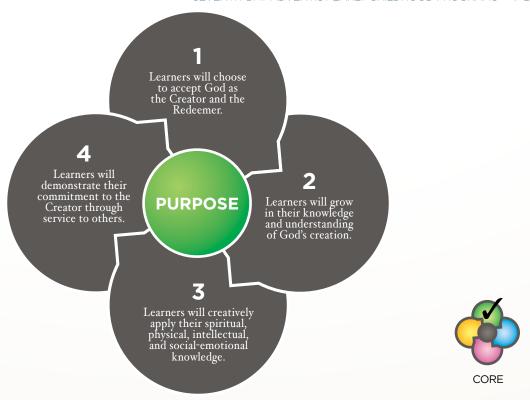

The following standards are to be met in all Seventh-day Adventist Early Childhood Programs. Included with the standards are indicators of implementation that identify the degree to which the standard has been effectively attained.

Each Standards Assessment Team is to:

- 1. Evaluate each standards statement and the indicators of implementation.
- 2. Collect and record evidences that support the implementation of the indicator. Make evidences available for the Visiting Team.
- 3. Complete the ECP response in a short narrative that describes how the evidences support the implementation of the indicator.
- 4. Determine by consensus the extent to which each indicator has been met.
- 5. Determine the overall rating for the standard.
- 6. If the overall rating is 2 or below, a recommendation for development of an action plan should be made to the Coordinating Team.

RATING LEVELS	SCORES	DESCRIPTORS
Exceptionally Met	4.0	Evidences provide strong support for the exceptional implementation of the indicator or standard
Met	3.0	Evidences provide sufficient support for the implementation of the indicator or standard
Partially Met	2.0	Evidences provide partial support for the implementation of the indicator or standard
Not Met	1.0	Evidences provide minimal or no support for the implementation of the indicator or standard

Philosophy of Adventist Education

The Seventh-day Adventist Church recognizes God as the ultimate source of existence, truth, and power. In the beginning God created in His image a perfect humanity, a perfection later marred by sin. Education in its broadest sense is a means of returning human beings to their original relationship with God. The distinctive characteristics of this Adventist worldview, built around creation, the fall, redemption, and re-creation, are derived from the Bible and the inspired writings of Ellen G. White.

The aim of true education is to restore human beings into the image of God as revealed by the life of Jesus Christ. Only through the guidance of the Holy Spirit can this be accomplished. An education of this kind imparts far more than academic knowledge. It fosters a balanced development of the whole person—spiritual, physical, intellectual, and social-emotional—a process that spans a lifetime. Working together, homes, early childhood programs, and churches cooperate with divine agencies to prepare learners to be good citizens in this world and for eternity.

Standard 1 measures how well the ECP achieves the purpose of Adventist education.

MISSION

To enable learners to develop a life of faith in God, and to use their knowledge, skills, and understandings to serve God and humanity.

VISION

For every learner to excel in faith, learning, and service, blending biblical truth and academic achievement to honor God and bless others.

Curriculum Supports

The ADVENTIST

WORLDVIEW serves as the lens for the curriculum development process. It can be thought of in terms of four parts: What is God's intention? Creation; How has God's purpose been distorted? The Fall; How does God help us to respond? Redemption; and How can we be restored in the image of God? Re-creation. These parts help structure and support the teaching and learning activities leading to the harmonious development of children, preparing them for this world and for eternity.

A VIABLE CURRICULUM is the core of the educational program, providing resources and time for the spiritual, mental, physical, social, and emotional development of learners. Adventist education standards, focusing on the knowledge, skills, and dispositions critical to learning in any one content area, serve as the framework for curriculum development. The process of curriculum mapping aligns these components across the grade levels in response to learner interests and needs.

INSTRUCTIONAL BEST

PRACTICES, informed by research that identifies how children learn best, focus on developing learners that are "thinkers and not mere reflectors of other men's thoughts." (E. G. White) Teaching strategies and behaviors also meet the needs of individual learners and ensure whole-person learning. These practices and strategies are used flexibly to design an instructional framework for units and lessons.

ASSESSMENT PROTOCOLS are used to collect data that informs changes in curriculum and instruction. A variety of assessments that provide ongoing feedback are used to track child progress toward learning outcomes and to inform instruction. Assessment practices also enable children to develop self-assessment skills and manage their own learning.

Standards 2-4 measure how well teaching and learning activities are structured to prepare learners for this world and for eternity.

Instructional Supports

A successful Adventist ECP is one in which both teachers and children are always learning; change is ongoing at all levels.

SUSTAINABLE
LEADERSHIP is key to creating a culture that continuously builds the instructional and learning capacities of teachers and children. Fullan and others identify three types of support that educational leaders can develop to ensure an effective program.

A particular ECP ENVIRONMENT or culture needs to exist in an Adventist ECP that is designed and maintained to promote child learning, while supporting the ECP's mission and goals. The ECP environment should be safe, nurturing, and foster an appreciation for diversity among children. Teachers should demonstrate a shared identity and the commitment to work together for greater change.

Time for continuous PROFESSIONAL LEARNING opportunities can build the instructional capacity of teachers through the collective development of new knowledge, skills, and understandings. Professional learning should be driven by child learning needs and aligned with system-wide philosophy and goals. Focus should also be given to teachers' social learning which enhances the potential for change and sustainability. A recommended sequence for professional learning begins with individual inquiry of content through readings or presentations followed by communication and collaboration with other educators often in a job-embedded context.

COMMUNICATION AND COLLABORATION

among ECP personnel, constituents, and community is essential to providing an effective ECP program. ECP leaders and teachers should collaborate to plan the instructional program, informed by assessment data. ECP personnel also need to consistently engage with and respond to parents, constituents, and the community as they develop ECP programs.

Standards 5-8 measure how well the ECP supports learner-centered practices.

Assessment Supports

An Early Childhood Program should systematically collect and analyze data in four domains to inform the change process. The end goal of all the domains is increased child achievement. ECP accreditation is a cumulative look at the total educational program through the eyes of all key stakeholders: leadership, teachers, children, ECP board, parents, and constituency. Evidence is gathered regarding the degree to which the educational program meets the ECP

IMPROVEMENT STANDARDS and indicators of implementation for Seventh-day Adventist ECPs. The standards and indicators address factors that have been identified as affecting child achievement.

CHILD STANDARDS, what learners should know (content) and be able to do (skills), serve as the framework for curriculum design, the instructional program, and assessment practices. Standards in Seventh-day Adventist programs reflect the Adventist worldview and are informed by consideration of national and provincial/ state standards. Assessment data is gathered and analyzed to determine if learners have met the standards and to inform curriculum and instructional planning.

Marzano notes that there are interdependent relationships among teachers, educational leadership, and child performance. The classroom behaviors of teachers and the vision and practices of leadership positively affect child performance when there are common goals and a common language of instruction. TEACHER STANDARDS and LEADERSHIP STANDARDS address vertical as well as horizontal alignment across the system. ECP leadership evaluation is focused on the extent to which leaders produce results in the actions of teachers;

teacher evaluation is focused on the specific results in child achievement.

extent to which teachers produce

The early learner standards are assessed in Standard 4. Teacher and leadership standards are assessed at the conference and are not a part of this accreditation process.

Standard 9 provides opportunity for the ECP to reflect on the accreditation process and self-study findings to inform the revision of the ECP improvement plan and the development of action plans that address areas needing improvement.

The study committee assigned to complete the standard for Learning Climate should also oversee the administration of the Stakeholder/Constituent Survey. Follow these instructions:

ADMINISTRATION OF STAKEHOLDER/CONSTITUENT SURVEY

The Constituent/Stakeholder Survey is to be distributed to all non-parent constituent church members and local members of non-constituent churches, and made available to others (non-parent) with vested interest in the success of the early childhood program. An accompanying letter from the director should indicate the purpose of the survey as an integral part of the program evaluation process and solicit full participation.

In consultation with the local conference office of education, the director and/or study committee may add questions that would be useful in assessing the quality of locally developed programs and initiatives.

TABULATION OF RESPONSES TO THE STAKEHOLDER/CONSTITUENT SURVEY

Respondents should return the completed survey sealed in an enclosed envelope to the early childhood program facility. Preserving confidentially and security is imperative.

The sealed surveys are to be given to the Visiting Committee chair, who will oversee their review. A report of Constituent/

Instructions for Developing Program-wide Continuous Improvement Plans (CIP)

Program-wide continuous improvement plans are a vital outcome of the evaluation process.

The development of CIPs provides the ECP an opportunity to transform its vision of excellence into strategic improvement plans for introducing change and creating a higher level of accountability. CIPs will be created for program-wide areas that need improvement.

A CIP is a detailed description of a strategic initiative. It includes clear goals and objectives, and estimates of necessary resources for effective implementation.

Program-wide improvement plans will be drafted by the coordinating committee and approved by the ECP governing board. Improvement plans will be based on the needs of the ECP program as identified during the self-evaluation process. The improvement plans should take into consideration information from stakeholder, teacher, and parent surveys.
